Liberal Labor Lies: Election Countdown

October 15, 2004

Every day between now and the election, a new liberal labor lie will be exposed. On election day, ordinary workers can make a choice. They can support pro-union positions that don't represent their values or their interests, or they can vote in favor of worker freedom.

Liberal Labor Lie of the Day: The Department of Labor is harassing labor unions by making them file lengthy and intrusive disclosure reports that serve only to harass workers and their duly appointed workplace representatives.

FACT: The Department of Labor is legally charged with making sure that unions are spending dues money on worker advocacy, not politics. Union bosses sure didn't gripe when corporate America was asked to increase its disclosure requirements in the wake of boardroom scandals.

AFL-CIO boss John Sweeney went so far as to say that corporate disclosure "rests on core principles that should command widespread support: transparency and accountability by company managers to the constituencies that support them." What's good for the goose is good for the gander.
